in amazement. Why? Sunday my wife and I were eating supper in a restaurant that is practically all windows and features window service as well as the usual indoo, service.

I noticed a car drive up with friends of ours-man, wife, two kids-and kept expecting them to come in. Noticed they kept talking and finally the wife gets out of the car, goes to the window and makes an order.

Time passed as time will and we finally left the restaurant. Stopped at the car of our friends to yak-yak a few minutes.

Right or the man asks-"Know what she (his wife) wanted me to do? Wanted me to come in and me wearing shorts." Went on to explain that the family had been out for a Sunday afternoon drive and were passing the cafe at sup-

President Gives Views of Meeting At Conference

Says He Does Not Favor Raising, Then Dashing World Hopes

WASHINGTON (U.P) - President Eisenhower said today that an exchange of visits between Soviet Defense Minister Marshal Georgei K. Zhukov and Defense Secretary

Charles E Wilson might be useful The President said at his news conference there is almost nothing he would not favor doing in an attempt to ease world tensions. But he made a specific exception. That exception, he said, is that no conference should be held which might raise world hopes and then dash them to pieces.

The President said, however, that he could see no harm in a meeting between Wilson and Zhukov.

The President discussed the pos sibility of such a meeting when a reporter asked whether he thought an exchange of visits between the U. S. and Soviet Defense Chiefs could serve a "useful purpose."

The President also:

-Said it would be logical for the U. S. to build a nuclear weapons stockpile for use by NATO Allies in case of attack. He said the U. S has been studying means of arming NATO properly for some time. He refused to discuss the status of any nuclear stockpile plans. Secretary of State Dulles disclosed Tuesday that the U. S.

-Said he is against recessing the London disarmament talks with Russia simply because some negotiators may be getting tired. He said it may be necessary once in a while to take a break when new ideas come up. But the President said the negotiators must not get discouraged.

-Declined to say whether he favors letting American reporters go into Red China. He said he would say nothing on that subject until after a meeting to be held at the State Department Thursday between Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and representatives of news media.

GENERAL TELEPHONE COMPANY IS MAKING CHANGES!

Moving day is in the offing for your Telephone Company and there are many changes being made as the work of converting to dial operation progresses.

You — the customer — will be affected by some of these changes! For the few weeks before your new dial service is in operation we ask that you supply your frequent callers with your new telephone number since we find it necessary to discontinue intercepting calls for changed numbers.

There will be no change in the handling of information calls — all requests for customers' numbers will be supplied in the usual manner. We have, however, prepared a special supplemental directory which lists many number changes made during the conversion period. This directory which will reach you within a few days, lists changes made prior to June 12, 1957.

We will appreciate your co-operation in working with us during this change over period.

coal in June, a production figure off some 305,000 tons from the previous month, Mines and Minerals Directr Ben H. Schull report-Schull said the June production was about 103,000 tons less than in June, 1956.

The June production casualty rate included two fatal accidents and 47 non-fatals, Schull said.

One death resulted in Christian County from a mine roof fall. The other, in Perry County, resulted from an accident involving surface machinery.

Schull said the total June production came from 98 mines in 26 Illinois counties.

He gave her time to recover herself. He sat at ease in the deep seat and watched the river spread itself before them; he looked at the water, and at the shore, at the occasional houses, the boat or two, and he waited.

The he said, with some firmness in his tone, "Let's go back, shall we? You spoke of the one-man love known to some women. And I wonder-not for the first time This has occurred to me before. Do you suppose, do you think that Valley could have killed Ben-and that Kurt has been protecting her?"

She was not at all shocked at his suggestion. She'd considered that idea before. Her face showed that

"Kurt and Valley," she said slowly, painfully, "had renewed their love-it had renewed itself for them. But, no, Garde. No . . . "

"Well, then, do you suppose Ben might have discovered the renewal of their love and acted upon his knowledge?"

This time she was puzzled. "What do you mean?" she asked. leaning toward him.

"A person will do murder where blackmail is threatened. And often will be considered justified."

"But would Ben have been the sort to try blackmail? It was a scheme with possibilities. Remem ber that your sister was-is-a pub lic figure, with a reputation to protect. That angle featured with Kurt, too, for a doctor's reputation is an asset which he cannot afford to risk or lose. That makes him open to blackmail at times when other men would not be vulnerable. Both Valley, and certainly Lillard, had money enough to make the project worth while. So, if Ben approached either one of them

She sat with one hand over her mouth, her eyes wide and dark "Oh," she whispered, "Kurt would have killed him!"

Garde sat more erect, and rubbed one bare arm with the other hand. "Or," he said deeply, "Kurt would have protected Valley if it was she who . . .

she did." He nodded at her and smiled a little with his eyes. "We don't know," he pointed out, "that this Ben would have tried blackmail. "Oh . . ." she said quickly, then stopped short. Garde leaned toward her. "Nan," he said earnestly. "D'you think we could find out? About some of the things which we don't know? Would you want to try?"

She sat staring at him, her face pale. Clay-colored.

"The truth can hurt," he affirmed the fear in her eyes. "But so does uncertainty. And this feeling that an innocent man is being punished."

"Yes," she said between stiff lips. "Oh, yes!" She turned her gaze back to the river and sat thought fully, as if trying to decide whether she wonted to know the truth

He loved Nan Stanfield, Realization whooped in on him like the cry of the gull they had just startled into screaming flight. He loved Nan-and if Kurt Lillard was freed -by any means-Kurt would marry this dark-haired girl whom Garde Shelton loved. Kurt Lillard already had everything which Garde had set for his aim in life. Why should Garde have to be the one to present him with still more, to give him his freedom and Nan?

He took a deep breath and smiled at Nan. "If I have to begin the story anywhere," he said deeply, "I think it would have to be with the visit which Valley made here last summer."

She sat silent for a little time longer, then sighed and began her

"Valley came home the middle of August, and I think she planned to stay her usual brief time-certainly not more than a couple of days judging from the clothes she brought with her. She arrived about noon, and we had settled down for a visit after lunch when Kurt stopped in. He kissed me and came on into the living room with me. Valley was sitting in one of the fireplace chairs and, oh, Garde, she was beautiful! Kurt just stood there gazing at her! I could n't blame him. The sunlight came in through the bay window, across the flowers we keep there; it made a pattern of gold on the carpetand they walked toward each other as if they were in a dream. I don't think they even touched hands. But I can remember how my skin went all goose pimples just to see the way they looked at each other. Kurt's face lit up, his eyes shone, and his mouth smiled. And Valley-well, glory is one word to describe the way she looked. She was so beautiful, it hurt."

her breast "They didn't talk, and Kurt went away again quite soon-and when he'd left I showed Valley my ring I hadn't had time before, and she said-well, she just said, 'Why.

About Town

And Country By TIMOTHEUS T.

A few—or maybe several—words about men and the wearing of shorts, the Bermuda type.

Every now and then I see some brave male out in public wearing Bermuda shorts and even though I know he is much more comfortable than guys like me that are still wearing the conventional downto-the-ankle length pants I still look at him-as many others doin amazement. Why?

Sunday my wife and I were eating supper in a restaurant that is practically all windows and features window service as well as the usual indoo. service.

I noticed a car drive up with friends of ours-man, wife, two kids-and kept expecting them to come in. Noticed they kept talking and finally the wife gets out of the car, goes to the window and makes an order.

Time passed as time will and we finally left the restaurant. Stopped at the car of our friends to yak-yak

3.3 Million Tons Coal Produced in Illinois in June

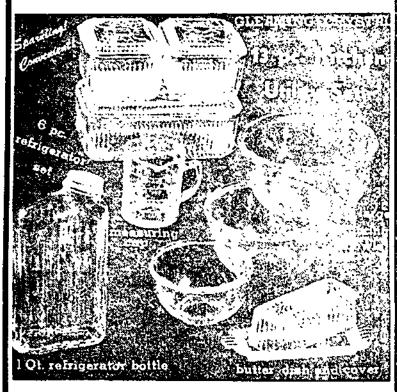

SPRINGFIELD & - Illinois mines turned out 3,356,709 tons of coal in June, a production figure off some 305,000 tons from the previous month, Mines and Minerals Directr Ben H. Schull reported today. Schull said the June production was about 103,000 tons less than in June, 1956. The June production casualty rate included two fatal accidents and 47 non-fatals, Schull said.

One death resulted in Christian County from a mine roof fall. The other, in Perry County, resulted from an accident involving surface machinery.

Schull said the total June production came from 98 mines in 26 Illinois counties.

Defending titleholder Jackie Burke, suffering from a right wrist injury which forced him to withdraw after two rounds in the National Open at Toledo last month, apperaed to have little chance of winning it again.

"I just can't hit the ball," Burke explained. "But I'm going to give it a try."

His fellow pros who know him best said that Burke was playing only because he thought it was the thing for a defending champion to

However, even if he was at the top of his game, Burke would only be rated second to rugged Doug Ford, who won the title in 1935 and who is the leading money winner on the 1957 tournament trail with earnings of $37,946. Ford, noted as a match player, was a 5-1 choice in the field of 128 teeing off for the first round play. There will be two 18-hole sudden death matches on Thursday and Friday, cutting flown the field to four for the 36-hole semifinals on Saturday. Those winners will meet in the 36-hole title round
